

Fabiola Núñez Neyra

She is a Forestry Engineer, Master in CITES, with specialization in management, sustainable use and conservation of wild flora and fauna species, as well as in citizen-oriented public management.

Is the Director of Ecosystem and Species Conservation of the Peruvian Ministry of Environment.

Relevant professional experience in the field of CITES:

Since 2017, the Director of Ecosystem and Species Conservation.

Since August 2019, Regional Representative for Central and South America and the Caribbean of the CITES Plants Committee

Since 2019, Co-Chair of the CITES Neotropical Trees Working Group; since 2019.

For more than 12 years, she has been a Forestry Specialist for the CITES Management Authority and CITES Coordinator for the CITES Scientific Authority of Peru.